

Window & Entryway Arches Create Focal Point for Sheraton Hotel Complex

Custom Colors and Downlight openings in Archways are "No Problem" for Weiss

A custom matched, forest green paint was required for the radiused aluminum panel accents on the 2000 Sheraton Hotel. Large archways enhanced the entrance while smaller spans were required for the windows. Lighting units were incorporated into the final design of the archways which kept the recessed window units bright and highlighted the red stone of the facade.

Tight delivery schedules were maintained by Weiss in order to keep the project on schedule. Of primary importance, was keeping the hotel open during the retrofit project. A Saturday drop off was required and Weiss delivered as promised, when the owner's made the delivery themselves to assure the project was on time.
